

THE PRESIDENT'S IDEA

the armistice, the only weapon Germany will have at her disposal. If extreme proposals are suggested such as would only breed another in due time, is an appeal to the conscience of the allies.

"Diplomatic Unity."

But the announcement of the achievement of diplomatic unity is taken here to mean that a method has been discovered of presenting a united front to Germany so that as she receives the diplomatic armistice terms simultaneously she will learn that the entente and the United States are not divided but absolutely agreed on a program of peace with justice. Turkey, Bulgaria and Austria-Hungary out of the war and the people of Vienna, Prague and the other cities of the east, who are in the midst of the German occupation, will find that the allies are indeed at the mercy of the allies.

"Unconditional surrender," and "Absolute peace" are phrases which when used by the president, when he is in his diplomatic correspondence, he should not employ language that would be interpreted as a threat to the allies. The president's friends have maintained throughout, however, that in his correspondence with the German people by appeal to their sense of national honor and pride.

The president's friends have maintained throughout, however, that in his correspondence with the German people by appeal to their sense of national honor and pride.

Prevented Anarchy.

So while Secretary Lansing was unable to discuss the details of the armistice terms, while correspondents were permitted merely to assume that the president's principles had been accepted as a basis by the allied governments, nevertheless there was an air of complete satisfaction in the official circles over the outcome of the momentous conferences in Paris. Officials pointed to the events of the last 24 hours as vindication of the government's position in recognizing that Germany was trying hard to surrender and in affording the machinery for such a surrender by the exchange of notes. These same officials declared with vehemence that if the president had followed the advice of those who were urging him to shut the door in the face of Germany, the result would have been complete anarchy in the central powers would have resulted in complete anarchy that might have spread over the borders of the allied nations and in the field indefinitely to bring about a situation that had not been entirely averted but the government view here is that the president's policy of international political campaigns has disappeared and the verdict at the polls Tuesday has been accepted with typical American sportsmanship the course of the president of the United States in his correspondence with Germany will be completely vindicated.
